

For immediate release
Contact: Noel Lloyd
717-724-4037

CURE INTERNATIONAL ANNOUNCES NEW STAFF ADDITIONS

Lemoyne, Pa. October 20, 2009: CURE International announced today the addition of three new employees at its Lemoyne, Pa., home office:

- Joel Worrall has joined CURE International as vice president of technology development. Worrall oversees the technical development and implementation of CURE's marketing, communications and constituent engagement systems. Prior to joining CURE, he served as vice president of engineering and development for Mzingo in Mechanicsburg, Pa.
- Joel Glovier is CURE International's new web and graphic designer. In his role, Glovier produces all visual content for CURE's communications initiatives. Previously, Glovier owned and operated JAG Design Ideas in Lebanon, Pa.
- Brad Statnick serves as a regional director of development. Statnick spearheads CURE International's development efforts throughout the Northeast U.S., building and cultivating relationships with individuals and organizations throughout the region. Prior to coming to CURE, he was a senior development officer for Messiah College in Grantham, Pa.

CURE International also announced Lisa Wolf has been promoted to senior vice president of communications and donor relations. She continues to manage the organization's marketing and public relations initiatives. She also works in collaboration with CURE International's senior vice president of development to cultivate donor relationships.

About CURE International

Founded in 1996, CURE International is the largest provider of pediatric specialty surgical care in the developing world, transforming the lives of physically disabled children and their families through medical and spiritual healing. To date, it has performed nearly 70,000 surgeries and seen more than 1,000,000 patients. Visit www.cureinternational.org for more information.

###